

Check Before You Copy or Scan

Copies made on this copying or scanning equipment are subject to Canadian copyright law.

Canada's copyright law governs the making of photocopies or other reproductions of copyright-protected works, and the communicating of such works via email or the Internet. Certain copying and communicating of those works may be an infringement of copyright.

The University is not liable for any infringing copies made or communicated using its copiers, printers, or scanners.

Copyright law provides that fair dealing for the purpose of research, private study, education, parody, satire, criticism, review or news reporting is not an infringement of copyright.

Copying without infringing copyright

The university has adopted a Fair Dealing Policy to assist in determining what may be copied or communicated without infringing copyright. Subject to various qualifications and safeguards, the Fair Dealing Policy permits the copying and communicating of short excerpts, and defines a short excerpt as:

up to 10% of a copyrighted work or the following, whichever is greater:

- one chapter from a book
- a single article from a periodical issue;
- an entire artistic work (e.g. painting, photograph, diagram, drawing, map, chart) from a work containing other artistic works
- an entire newspaper article or page
- an entire single poem or musical score from a work containing other poems or musical scores
- an entire entry from an encyclopedia, dictionary, or similar reference work;

provided that in each case, no more of the work is copied than is required in order to achieve the allowable purpose
